THE PROBLEM WE INVESTIGATE

Messages fail quietly.

Young people mix English into everyday Latvian chats. In a group of friends that works fine.

Forwarded to parents, grandparents, younger pupils or someone still learning Latvian, the same message causes real mistakes: wrong room, wrong day, nobody shows up.

The point isn't that English is bad. It's this: say it so your reader understands.

SDG 4 · Quality Education

Vocabulary, reading and writing for a real purpose.

SDG 10 · Reduced Inequalities

Include the readers that unclear messages leave out.

SDG 11 · Sustainable Cities

Clear Latvian between generations and neighbours.

Exhibit B, the loop

HOW A CASE PLAYS

01 Briefing

Twenty pupils were expected. Three came.

02 Evidence

Tap suspicious phrases in chats, emails and plans.

03 Interviews

Four witnesses, time for three. Catch contradictions.

04 Deduction

Pick the real causes. “It was English” is a trap.

05 The fix

Rewrite the message for pupils and for parents.

06 Friday, 15:00

The event replays with your message. Who shows up?

8–12 minutes per case, a mistake gives feedback, never a game over

We'll know it works when…

- scores improve when a player replays a case
- players flag fewer harmless English words, so they judge clarity, not language
- answers in the after-check are better than in the before-check
